"LET sweet-voiced Mercy plead for her, who calmly sleeps beneath the sod; nor erring man in pride usurp the province of her judge, her God." This is a beautiful sentiment, the inspiration of one who fell with "his face to the enemy" during the last epidemic. The tombstone on which it is engraved marks the burial-place of a fallen woman, but one whose charities and good deeds far outnumbered her sins. The author, whose charity for that woman's sins was thus worded, died during the epidemic just past. Hundreds knew him, and hundreds mourn his loss.

On motion, all the citizens present were requested to obtain lists of the orphans and widows, and to report at the next meeting. The committee on permanent organization will report at Arnold's schoolhouse, on the eighth day of November, 1878, at ten o'clock in the morning.

THE NATIONAL COMMISSION Arrived and at Work Investigating the Causes and Effects of the Enidemie of 1878.

Dr. Jerc ine Cochrane, of the commission appointed by Surgeon-General Woodworth to visit the infected districts, and Colonel T. S. Hardee, engineer of the commission, arrived in the city yesterday and are stoppting at the Peabody. An Arreal, representative visited the gentlemen last night, by whom he was cordially received. Dr. Cochrane, who by his pleasant manners and intelligent conversation on the subject of yellow-fever, gave evidence that his appointment on the commission was most wise, entertained as about thirty minutes, during which time we learned the object of his mission. The commission was sent into the districts infected by yellow-fever, not to make pathological investigations nor manner of treatment of yellow-fever, but to study the methods by which the fever is admitted, disseminated and propagated in the interior, with the view of establishing a basis of future security, if possible, against another such visitation. The commission's investigations will form the groundwork, penhaps, of national legislation which may have the effect to secure us against the importation of the disease from foreign parts. Dr. Cochrane and Colonel Hardee are now from New Orleans, having visited various points on the route, among them, Port Eads. Osykia, MyComb Ciry, Jackson, Frenada, Water Valley, Holly Springs, Grand Junction, Chattanooga, Decatur, etc., arriving at Memphis yesterday evening. They have made maps and diagrams of the cities they have visited, neatly and intelligently illustrating the effects of the fever, the fover. The same work will be done for Memphis. The infected districts will be visited, and Bayon Gayoso will be scrutinizingly inspected, and all the facts that can be gleaned concerning the introduction and promotion on the fever here will be carefully investigated, and everything connected with the spread of the fever in sections, districts and towns, with the view to establish the fact of it being other than a contagion or an infection. In order to get all information possible in reference to have reached, that this yellow-fever is the genuine uticle, and was imported into the country and from one town to another. The present investigations are of a preliminary character, the members of the commission passing hastily through the localities so as to enable them to make a report to the American board of health association, which meets at Richmond, Virginia, on the nineteenth of the present month. Colonel Hardee is a nephew of the gatiant W. J. Hardee, of Confederate war faine.

What the Politicians Expect

Washington, D. C., November 2.—Now that the hurly-burly of the political campaign is almost over, the two congressional campaign committees have made their statements as to the probable results. The Democrats expect to gain all the Republican districts in the couth, with but one or two exceptions, and hold their own in the northern States. It has calculations prove correct, the next house war estainly be Democratic by between thirty and forty unalority. Per confret, the Republicans think they can hold Rainey's (Charleston, South Carolina, district, and possibity Smalls: that the fifth district of Louistana (Leonard's) will go Republican, and that the chances are favorable to the Republican candidate in the sixth Maryland district. They expect to gain two members from New England, Morse and Dean's Massachuscuts districts, defeat Landers in Constitution, the wealthy New England, Morse and Dean's Massachuscuts districts, defeat Landers in Constitution, the wealthy New Hampshire brewer. They likewise expect to gain of three, one in Wisconsin, and claim a fighting chance for the temposentative in the Detroit district. It is within their calculation that Jorgensen will be elected in the Petersburg district. If these prognostications pan out, the house would still be Pemocratic, but by so light a majority that the Democratic members would have always to be on the alert to keep a voting majority on hand.
